

The National Institute of Mental Health invites parents of children ages 1 to 4 years to contact them about a study related to children with autism. The study is not only for children with autism, but also healthy children and children with developmental delays. For details, please call (301) 435-7962 or email nimh-asd@mail.nih.gov (<mailto:nimh-asd@mail.nih.gov>).

The National Institute of Mental Health is researching a medication (riluzole) with potential to help repetitive behaviors and obsessive thoughts in children and adolescents ages 7-17. Children must have an Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) or Obsessive-Compulsive Disorder. Please call (301) 435-6652 or email OCDNIMH@intra.nimh.nih.gov (<mailto:OCDNIMH@intra.nimh.nih.gov>).
